INTRODUCTION

In August, 2005, Congress passed a law called the Underground Storage Tanks Compliance Act of 2005. Section 1523 of that act mandates that every state inspect every tank which has “not underground an inspection since December 22, 1998” be inspected “not later than 2 years after the enactment of this subsection”. Section 1523 goes on to state that after all tanks have been inspected once, then every state “shall conduct on-site inspections of each underground storage tank regulated under this subtitle at least once every 3 years.” Section 9011 of that act requires that every state report to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency on every underground storage tank facility owned by the federal government, the state government or any branch of local government. This “State Compliance Report” is due “Not later than 2 years after the date of enactment of this subsection.” This report is required to list the location and owner of each underground storage tank which is owned by the government and is not in compliance with the underground storage tank program. This report is also required to list the date of the last inspection for each government owned tank.

There are 217 underground storage tank facilities which are owned by any level of government within Wyoming. Of these, 110 are federally owned, 33 are state owned, and 74 are owned by various local governments. Of the federally owned tank facilities, 2 are owned by the Veterans Administration, 1 is owned by the Air National Guard, 25 are owned by the National Park Service and 82 are owned by the United States Air Force at Warren Air Force Base. 50 of the facilities at Warren Air Force Base are slated for removal next summer as part of the decommissioning of the Peacekeeper Missile System. The 32 state owned facilities are owned by a wide variety of agencies no one of which owns more than 8 facilities.

FEDERALLY OWNED AND OPERATED UNDERGROUND STORAGE TANKS

Of the 110 facilities owned by the federal government, 33 have been inspected within the last two years, and 77 have not been inspected since December 22, 1998. These 77 facilities which have not been inspected since December 22, 1998 were all inspected shortly before that date, and all but one of them are emergency power generator tanks which are exempt from leak detection requirements under the federal program. Under amendments passed December 1, 2005, these emergency power generator tanks are no longer exempt from leak detection requirements in Wyoming. Of the 77 facilities which have not been inspected since December 1, 2005, 50 are scheduled for removal this summer, the other 27 facilities will be inspected no later than July 1, 2006. The State of Wyoming inspects the removal of all underground storage tanks to verify if they leaked during their service life. All 77 of these facilities had overfill and spill prevention equipment by December 22, 1998 and the presence of this equipment was verified by on site inspection by state personnel. All 77 of these facilities is protected against corrosion using impressed current systems except one located at horseshoe bend marina which has sacrificial anodes. Reports are on file with the department which show that all required cathodic protection tests have been performed on all 77 of these facilities. Based on our review of department files and databases, the State of Wyoming believes that the 110 facilities owned by the federal government are in compliance with all aspects of the underground storage tank program with the following exceptions:

The violation at the Moose Visitor Center Fleet Fueling Facility was for failing to perform sixty day checks of the rectifier on the impressed current system. Also at the Moose facility, the operator was not performing inventory control when the primary method of leak detection is automatic tank gauging. The violation found at the Mammoth Hot Springs Fleet Fueling Facility was for failing to have overfill protection on one of the tanks. Apparently someone removed the butterfly valve for maintenance and failed to re-install it. The violation at the Lake Generator was for a failing cathodic protection test. All of these violations were handled with letters of violation.

This is a compliance rate of 97.2% for all federally owned facilities in Wyoming.

STATE OWNED UNDERGROUND STORAGE TANKS

The State of Wyoming owns a total of 32 underground storage tank facilities. Of these, eight have not been inspected since December 22, 1998. One additional facility has not been inspected since January 1, 2002. The State of Wyoming expect to complete inspections of every state owned facility which has not been inspected since January 1, 2002 this summer. The other 24 facilities have all been inspected since January 1, 2002. Two of these facilities are owned by the Department of Transportation. They are service stations which were taken entirely for highway right of way, the tanks are temporarily out of use and they are scheduled for removal this summer.

Based on the inspections performed to date, the 32 underground storage tank facilities owned by the State of Wyoming are in compliance with all aspects of the underground storage tank program with the following exceptions:

The violations listed for Casper Community College and WDOT were both for failing to do inventory control when the primary method of leak detection was automatic tank gauging. Both of these violations were handled by letter of violation. The Violations listed for the University of Wyoming was for filling the tank through a fill pipe without a spill bucket or overfill device and for failing to report a release. A Notice of Violation was issued to the University of Wyoming in response to the violations discovered during that inspection.

This is an overall compliance rate of 90.6 percent for tanks owned by the State of Wyoming.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT OWNED UNDERGROUND STORAGE TANKS

There are 74 underground storage tank facilities owned by local governments in Wyoming. 20 percent of the 75 facilities owned by local governments are owned school districts, 36.5 percent are owned by cities and towns, 12 percent are owned by counties and operated only for fueling county vehicles, 11 percent are owned by local hospitals, 7 percent are owned by airports with the remaining 13.5 percent owned by a variety of entities such as cemetery districts, fire protection districts, etc. There are 59 different owners listed for these 74 facilities.

The State of Wyoming has inspected 58 of the local government owned tanks since January 1, 2002. Two additional facilities were last inspected before January 1, 2002 and December 22, 1998. There are 14 facilities which have not been inspected since before December 22, 1998. The State of Wyoming expects to complete new inspections on all 16 of these facilities which have not been inspected since before January 1, 2002 this summer.

The violations discovered at local government owned underground storage tanks are listed below:

The violations discovered at both of the Town of Torrington facilities were for failing to maintain sump sensors in operable condition when they are used as the only line leak detection method. A letter of violation was issued and the sump sensors were immediately repaired. The violation at Goshen County School District #1 was for failing to test the steel lines when the cathodic protection test on the steel tank was completed. The violation at the Natrona County Road and Bridge facility was for failing to do inventory control when automatic tank gauging is the primary method of leak detection. The violation at the Natrona County School District was for no passing results on the automatic tank gauging system for five months in 2005. The violation at the Little Snake River Valley School was for failing to do leak detection on a tank which is already equipped with an automatic tank gauge. At this location, the school district was not doing anything, no records were being kept and the automatic tank gauge had not made a test in over a year. A followup inspection is being scheduled to determine if leak detection is being done now. The violation at the Campbell County School District was for a possible hole in the spill bucket. This was resolved when the school district cleaned out the spill bucket and tested it with water for twenty-four hours proving that it did not leak. The violation at the Campbell

County Hospital was for having more than three years between the last two cathodic protection tests. The violation at the Parks Department of the City of Cheyenne was for failing to perform inventory control on a tank when automatic tank gauging is the primary leak detection method.
